MAIN FEATURE

THE FOUNDER

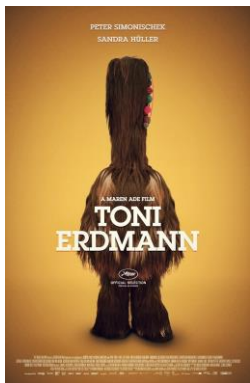

"You can't start a fast food empire without getting a little greedy," say the posters for this story about burger big boss Ray Kroc, the (sort of) founder of McDonalds. Kroc was a pretty average get-ahead sort of a guy when in 1956 he spotted something extraordinary at a local burger joint: queues round the block, and revolutionary fast fulfilment of the orders. Rather against their better judgement the restaurant's owners, brothers Ray and Mac McDonald, agreed to go into partnership with Kroc - and they eventually find out: 'Kroc by name, croc by nature...'
"Michael Keaton is terrific." (Total Film)
He makes Kroc likeable, recognisable, even as he becomes the 1950s embodiment of Donald Trump's mercenary values. With a smart script and very modish art direction, "this is an absorbing and unexpectedly subtle movie." ★★★★★ Guardian

COMING SOON...

TONI ERDMANN from 24 Feb

"By a wide margin the funniest almost-three-hour German comedy you will ever see." ★★★★★ NY Times A favourite, also, with the discerning Lexi staff!

JACKIE from 24 Feb

Natalie Portman brilliantly evokes the charismatic woman who, for a time, was the most famous person in the world. The story promises to decode the myth, but it serves Jackie Kennedy best by perpetuating the mystique. ★★★★★ Guardian
